

Supplementary Information

Figure S1. Negative and positive controls used in immunohistochemical staining. For each molecule analyzed, the negative control (upper left) was a vertebral body after specific antigen pre-incubation. An unstained area was used when the peptide was unavailable. Positive controls were considered in stained territories (according to the literature).

