Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

MDPI has recently published a compilation of 20 papers summarizing the research efforts in improving the performance of nickel metal hydride (NiMH) batteries prior to 2016 in a single volume. To continue to serve the NiMH research community, we are planning to extend the effort to collect the NiMH-related papers in another coming volume—also a Special Issue of the same journal (Batteries). Papers of review, current research, and future planning in the materials, fabrication methods, cell integration and development, performance evaluation, failure analysis, market opportunities, and other subjects related to NiMH batteries are invited. Discussions and comments prior to manuscript submissions are also welcomed.
