Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue of Batteries focuses on the advances in organic materials and their structure-property relationships in the context of solar cells/batteries, but also on the architectures and processing techniques of such devices, these being all factors which are closely interrelated for an improved performance. Materials include small molecules, polymers, organic-inorganic hybrids, interfacial and electrode materials, semiconductors and conductors. Fundamental and applied studies, including manufacturing techniques, stability of materials and devices, are of interest for this Special Issue.
