Message from the Guest Editors

Neurodegenerative diseases affect millions of people worldwide and their incidence is on the rise due to the increasing life expectancy. These diseases, including Alzheimer's disease (AD), Parkinson's disease (PD), Huntington's disease, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS), frontotemporal dementia, ataxias and glaucoma, encompass a range of conditions that result in progressive neuronal damage and connectivity, affecting mobility, coordination, strength, sensation, and cognition.

This Special Issue, edited by Dr. López-Cuenca and Dr. De Hoz, will focus on the latest advances in research on neurodegenerative diseases, including basic, translational and clinical sciences, with the aim of expanding knowledge on the pathophysiological mechanisms and therapeutic perspective of these diseases.
