Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue aims to bring together a collection of work on current and developing ethical issues in the field of family history, and their implications for professional and non-professional practitioners, members of the public, commercial organisations, and institutions, policy makers and legislators. Contributions are invited from any relevant discipline (including humanities, law, genetics, health and social care, sociology) and from practitioners and professional genealogists. Topics relevant for this Special Issue include (but are not limited to) the following:

- How family historians perceive and manage ethical concerns in practice.
- Telling difficult stories ethically.
- The ethical relationship between family history research and current/historical issues of social justice.
- Genetic genealogy and the interests and rights of indigenous people.
- Ethical responsibilities to the dead.
- The implications of the commercialisation and commodification of family history research.
- Consumer DNA testing and the rise of forensic genetic genealogy.
- Codes of practice and ethical guidelines.

Message from the Editorial Board

Genealogy is a scholarly journal that provides a venue for academic, cutting-edge contributions to the interdisciplinary field of genealogy studies. We welcome contributions that examine genealogies of family lineage, use genealogical considerations and methods in examining other historical processes (including migration histories, personal, social, and national identities, and social institutions) or study the construction of genealogical narratives. The journal is also interested in biographical studies and their contribution to the understanding of broader social and historical phenomena.

Author Benefits

Open Access: free for readers, with article processing charges (APC) paid by authors or their institutions.

High Visibility: indexed within Scopus, ESCI (Web of Science), and many other databases.

Rapid Publication: manuscripts are peer-reviewed and a first decision is provided to authors approximately 24.9 days after submission; acceptance to publication is undertaken in 4.9 days (median values for papers published in this journal in the second half of 2023).
