Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

It is the aim of this Special Issue to enhance collaboration between geoscientists, geochemists, biologists, ecologists, toxicologist, epidemiologists, health professionals and other allied professionals and researchers to protect and mitigate both public and environmental health, and ultimately to increase public awareness about the consequences of humans' daily activities. The topics of interest include, but are not limited to: (a) geochemical processes controlling environmental behaviour of toxic and potentially toxic elements and minerals; particularly source, distribution, dispersion, and bioavailability of the elements/minerals in surface environments; and (b) assessment and mitigation of environmental quality and public health in urban settings. In this Special Issue, we also welcome articles based on undergraduate research projects on urban environmental and medical geochemistry/geology, or projects emphasizing role of geology in human health.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Understanding the Earth's origin and its bio-geological evolution, the multiple implications of the geosciences (as a coherent set of interconnected disciplines), and the sociocultural and ethical interdisciplinary approaches, will be crucial for a better understanding of Nature, and also for undertaking scientifically based political decisions.

We are committed to drive Geosciences to a position in which it is recognized for its high-quality, cutting-edge research and scientific influence, and strongly encourage and invite your participation and manuscripts.
