Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

The term age-friendly has become commonplace over the past decade but it means many things to different people. Different lexicons and approaches restrict the ability for any of us to have a positive international discussion that can move us ahead collectively. The purpose of this special Issue is to invite voices from around the world to discuss the meaning of age-friendly in the context of their work including age-friendly cities, age-friendly health systems, age-friendly communities, age-friendly public health systems, age-friendly universities and dementia-friendly settings.
