Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

From typhoons/hurricanes to coastal erosion to oil spills, many marine hazards threaten our ocean as well as coastal areas and could be aggravated by the changing climate. The current Special Issue aims to publish the most exciting research concerning the subject of marine hazards. We provide a rapid turnaround time regarding reviewing and publishing, and disseminate articles freely for research, teaching, and reference purposes worldwide.

High-quality papers are encouraged, for publication directly related to various aspects of marine hazards, as mentioned below. Novel techniques for research are highly encouraged.
