Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue will highlight current developments and novelties in the use of FRP as reinforcement in existing or newly constructed concrete structures. Studies involving the integration of FRPs in concrete structural members and structures, including traditional and modern experimental, numerical and analytical investigations are welcome. The research that will be discussed and presented herein focuses on the use of FRP systems in reinforced concrete structural members, as well as the performance of FRPs (including bond performance) under monotonic and cyclic loadings and various environmental exposures
