Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

The special issue on Religion, the Public Sphere and Public Reason focuses on historical, conceptual and normative-practical dimensions of this multi-disciplinary discourse. It has analyses from philosophy, theology and religious studies as its scope with the purpose of offering mutually illuminating perspectives across different eras. The historical case studies are taken from religions around the Mediterranean in view of the significance for subsequent developments. The encounters and transformations of religions and philosophies since the time of their origins are relevant for contemporary discourse on religion in the public sphere and the evaluation of their compatibility with distinct concepts of public reason.

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community - disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
