Message from the Guest Editors

We welcome the submission of manuscripts to our Special Issue on (but not limited to) the following topics:

1. Test and analysis of the application effect of medical image key point detection algorithms, medical image segmentation algorithms, and medical image target classification algorithms;
2. Application of artificial intelligence in the digital measurement of human anatomy, diagnosis of coronary heart disease, pulmonary nodules, and spinal measurement;
3. Calculation of the risk of disease or other unexpected events for healthy people or patients based on medical images;
4. Use of real-time medical images to detect disease in patients, so as to assist treatment or provide an early warning of changes in patients' conditions;
5. Perform diagnosis and differential diagnosis through medical images during the course of the disease, assist in the formulation of medical plans, and predict the prognosis of patients;
6. Based on medical images, evaluate the information that is difficult to obtain manually on images, including molecular biological characteristics and metabolites;
7. New methods for semi-automatic or fully automatic medical information extraction.
