Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues

The Internet of Things is made of devices and objects, e.g. sensors, wearables, smartphones, that are connected together through the internet. The connected devices can be combined with automated systems and artificial intelligence to perform actions or to learn specific data patterns.

IoT technologies will revolutionise our life in the years to come. From smart objects to connected machines in factories that have the potential to enable the Industry 4.0 revolution.

This Special Issue will bring together review papers on the recent advances in the multidisciplinary field of IoT technologies and the important gaps that still remain in order to obtain massive diffusion. Articles in this Special Issue will address topics that include communication, networking, sensing, materials, integration and data science. The Special Issue is edited by the board members of the ICT section of Technologies:
