

Synthesis of a multi-template molecular imprinted bulk polymer for the adsorption of non-steroidal inflammatory and antiretroviral drugs

Sisonke Sigonya^a, Teboho Clement Mokhenab, Paul Mayer^{c*}, Phumlane Selby Mdluli^b, Talent Raymond Makhanya^a, Thabang Hendrica Mokhothu^a

^aDepartment of Chemistry, Durban University of Technology, P.O Box 1334, Durban, 4000, South Africa

^bDST/Mintek NIC, Advanced Materials Division, Mintek, 200 Malibongwe Drive, Randburg, South

^cDepartment of Chemistry and Biomolecular Sciences, University of Ottawa, 10 Marie-Curie Pvt, Ottawa ON Canada K1N 6N6

Corresponding Author: PaulMichael.Mayer@uottawa.ca*

Supplementary Data

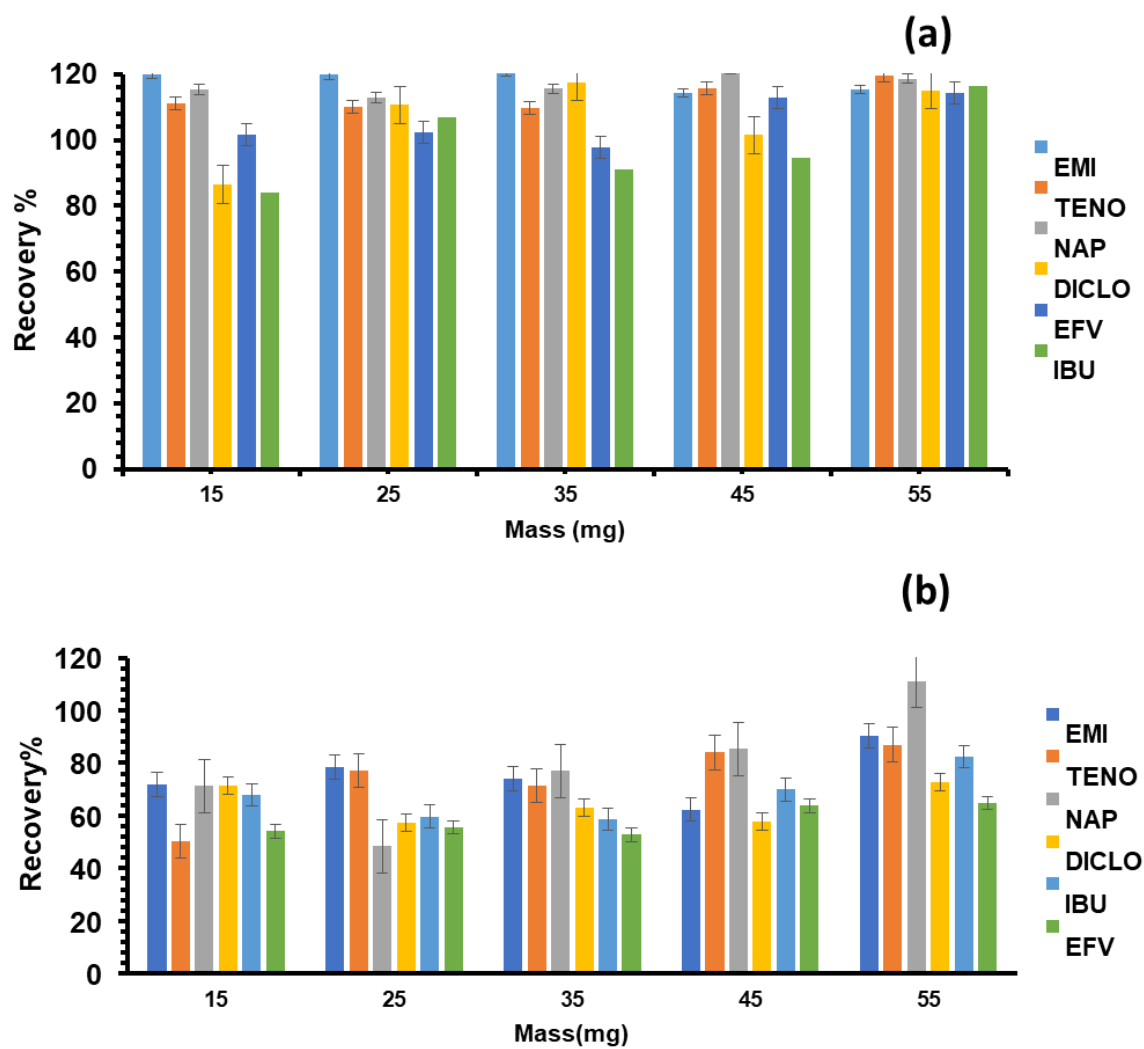

Figure S1: Mass effects of (a) MIP and (b) NIP for ARVs and NSAIDs recoveries

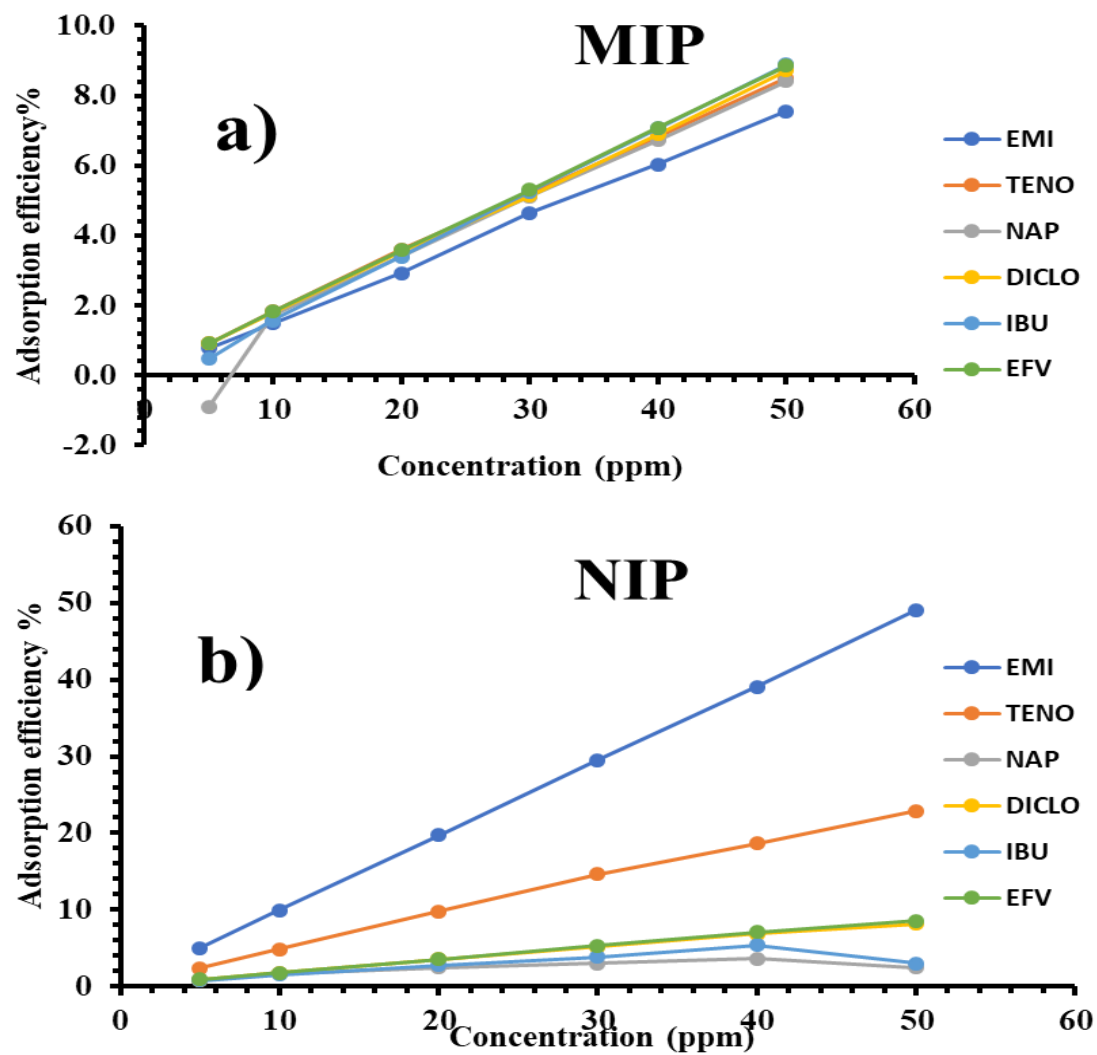

Figure S2: Effects of target initial concentration on the adsorption capacity with (a) MIP and (b) NIP.

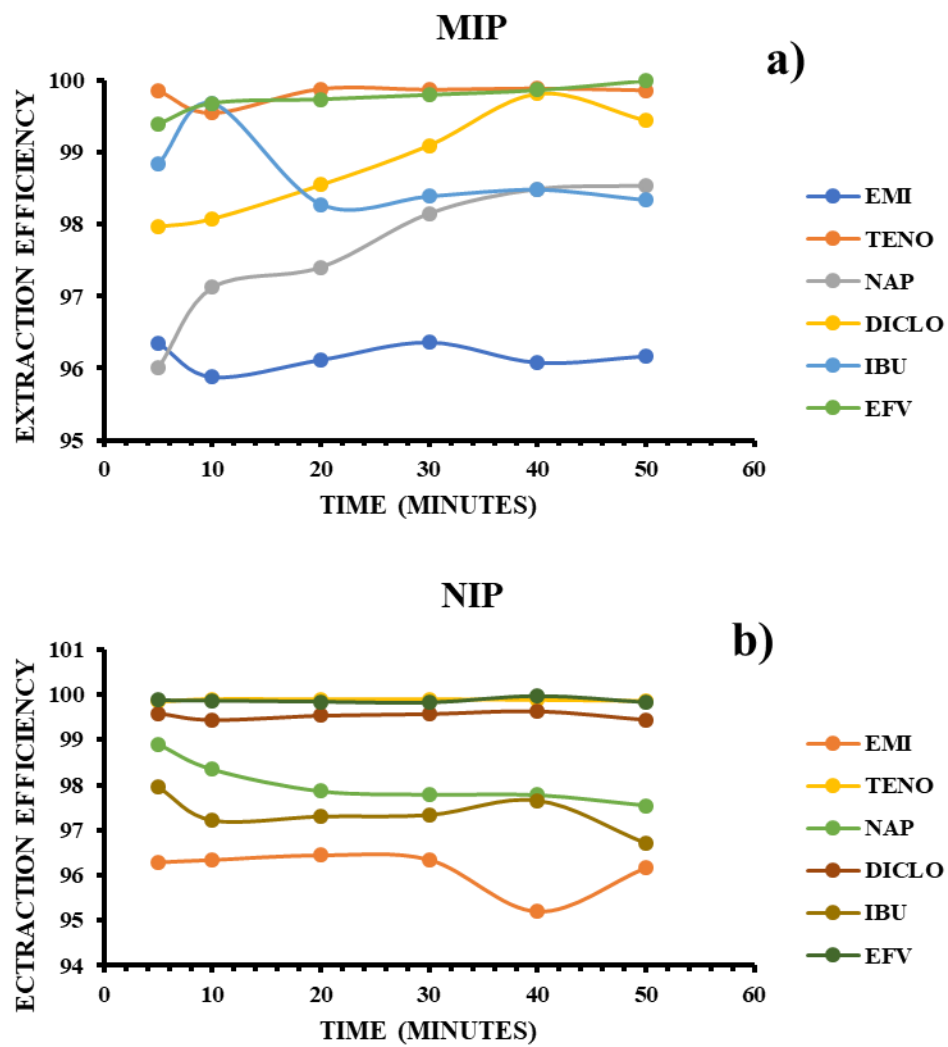

Figure S3: Extraction efficiency (a) MIP and (b) NIP based on template contact times.