Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Aquaculture has undergone extensive development in recent decades due to the great efforts of researchers and producers. Nowadays, the consumers' pressure demanding more quantity and higher quality products, as well as the need for more sustainable and efficient practices, requires starting a new era in aquaculture research. In this step, the role of emerging talents will be essential to meet this challenge. This Special Issue seeks to make a compendium of the novel approaches and emerging frontiers that can contribute to the progress of research and production practices for a new strategy in aquaculture. Researchers are encouraged to submit their papers on new technologies, innovative approaches, and novel solutions for diet formulation, diagnosis, analytical tools, and sustainable production, among other topics. Review articles focusing on new insights and recent contributions to aquaculture research are also welcome.
