Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Advances in equine anesthesia and analgesia are under continuous development. Since the last preliminary results of the CEPEF-4 multicenter study, new improvements are still necessary to decrease the morbidity and mortality rate in equine anesthesia. After the success of the Special Issue "Anesthesia and Analgesia in Equids", a new Special Issue has been proposed to focus on new advances in anesthesia and analgesia than contribute to the safety of Equids.

In this Special Issue, we invite original clinical or experimental research papers and reviews of studies addressing advances in Equine anesthesia and analgesia, including techniques, drugs, loco-regional anesthesia, monitoring, pain evaluation, and any original findings that contribute towards making an advancement in this field.
