Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

Evolution in animals is an interesting topic. Under different selection pressures, such as domestication, climated changes, human activities and so on, animals have been phenotypically and genetically modified to adapt the situation. In this Special Issue, we call for a wide range of original research articles and reviews related to animal evolution. The species could be wild and domestic animals and could also be birds, fish, mammals and insects. We look forward to receiving your contributions.
