Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

In recent years, toxicology has undergone rapid transformation and now has a new and emerging set of facts and issues. This volume serves as a bridge between toxicology and several related areas and will include a collection of peer-reviewed research and development concerning several topics, including toxicology, epigenetic toxicology, transcriptomics, action of plastic residues pollutants, pesticides, and household and industrial effluents, in natural and controlled environments. The aim here is to inform the public about research related to toxicological studies applied to the aquatic environment with fish as model organisms.
