Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

I am thrilled to announce the upcoming release of a Special Issue in Biomedicines, entitled "Prostate Cancer: Molecular Imaging and Radionuclide Therapy." This collection of articles will feature contributions from leading experts in the field of positron emission tomography/computed tomography (PET/CT) and radionuclide therapies for prostate cancer. The rapidly evolving field of theranostics, which combines diagnostic and therapeutic radiopharmaceutical agents, is revolutionizing prostate cancer imaging and paving the way for improved treatment strategies. This Special Issue aims to highlight recent advancements in molecular imaging and radionuclide therapy that have already impacted the management of prostate cancer and those that have the potential to shape the diagnostic and treatment paths of the disease in the near future.
