Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

This Special Issue aims to focus on the complex interactions between inflammation and hemostasis with special attention on the unique biological functions and molecular and cellular interactions between these pathways. Submission of original research articles and reviews is encouraged. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following:

- Basic research studies exploring novel molecular or cellular interactions in the fields of inflammation and hemostasis (including animal models);
- Clinical studies related to acute or chronic inflammatory states in patients and their effect on the hemostasis system (including studies on COVID-19);
- Studies addressing novel therapeutic targets in inflammatory and/or hemostasis pathways;
- Studies on novel methods, models, or biomarkers of related fields.

We look forward to receiving your contributions.
