Message from the Guest Editors

We are pleased to lead this special effort addressing the surgical and multi-disciplinary management of soft tissue sarcomas. Soft tissue sarcomas comprise a heterogenous group of malignancies of mesenchymal origin. Optimizing the outcomes for this diverse family of tumors with a wide spectrum of biologic aggressiveness requires a multi-disciplinary approach.

Exciting developments are under investigation for soft tissue sarcomas, and the intersection of cutting-edge medical, surgical, and radiation therapy with advances in sarcoma biology, the tumor microenvironment, and immunotherapy promises to pave the way for further advances in soft tissue sarcoma outcomes.
