Message from the Guest Editors

The COVID-19 pandemic has brought the world to its knees, provoking health, social, and economic upheavals, potentially contributing to widespread emotional distress and an increased risk of psychiatric disorders in people of all ages. Even after three years of the health emergency state related to COVID-19, it is necessary to assess the impact of these events on the mental health of children, adolescents, parents, and families.

The purpose of this Special Issue, which is the 2nd edition of the Special Issue "Children’s Mental Health, Parenting, Family and Groups’ Resilience in Crisis", is to publish relevant research dealing with the way family, parents, and children/adolescents manage stress in times of crisis, with consistent clinical implications, to strengthen individuals and groups to enable the development of their resilience.

We encourage authors to send a short abstract (500 words max.) and a tentative title in advance. Completed manuscripts must be submitted via the online portal.
