Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue will cover several aspects of paediatric dentistry with an emphasis on childhood caries, the first months of life and how to develop good oral health, and new frontiers in paediatric dentistry and in prevention. Uneven epidemiology has consequences for caries risk assessment, treatment plans, patient/parent motivation, and public health measures, each itself a topic to be explored.

We will deal with carrying out very in-depth research on the risk of caries, which is a very important topic at this point in time and which greatly influences epidemiology. We will also investigate the study of new technological tools used in Paediatric Dentistry.
