Message from the Guest Editor

The human eye is a marvel of biological engineering, enabling us to experience the world in vibrant detail. However, a wide range of diseases can threaten this precious sense. Early and accurate diagnosis, coupled with effective management strategies, is crucial for preserving vision and improving patients' quality of life.

This Special Issue of Diagnostics aims to explore the latest advancements in eye disease diagnosis, management and prognosis. We invite submissions that address the evolving landscape of ophthalmology and contribute to improved patient care.

We encourage submissions from a variety of research disciplines, including ophthalmology, biomedical engineering and computer science. This Special Issue welcomes original research articles, reviews and perspectives that advance the field of eye disease diagnosis, management and prognosis.

We look forward to receiving your valuable contributions!

Sincerely,

Dr. Adam Wylęgała
