This Special Issue will be dedicated to publishing original work and reviews that contribute to our understanding of the TME and its role in cancer diagnosis. Studies related to the function of the various TME components and their use in cancer diagnosis will be published. Further, studies involving the use of advanced imaging techniques, liquid biopsies, etc. will be most welcome. Studies pertaining to biomarker discovery, TME microvesicles and exosomes, and mechanism-based studies involving different TME structural components in the context of cancer diagnosis will be included in this Special Issue.
