Advances in the Diagnosis and Management of Psychosis

Message from the Guest Editor

Novel diagnostic biomarkers, emerging from structural, functional neuro-imaging and magnetic-resonance spectroscopy, will be compared in terms of their prediction value with other diagnostic tests, such as genetic, immune-biological, and psychomotor measures. In this Special Issue, we will address the incremental validity of those methods in the context of complex multimodal and machine learning modeling of the signatures of mental disorder, and we will be particularly focused on the relevance of those biomarkers for the early detection of psychosis, direction of new treatment strategies, and monitoring of their effect.
