Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

European integration is at a crossroads. With increasing fragmentation and competition worldwide, the shrinking and reshuffling of global value chains, the redesigning of strategic alliances for energy and critical raw materials, and the need to increase the European level of economic sovereignty and strengthen the common industrial policy, a major change is needed in both the instruments and governance of the European economy.

Among the topics to be explored: adjusting policy mixes and economic governance to become a global actor; the international role of the euro; completing the banking union and the European capital market; how to manage a multilayered economic policy; the role of the European Stability Mechanism; how to expand the budget (own resources) and what to use it for (European public goods); how to finance and govern the economy across green and digital transitions; and the future perspectives of trade and monetary agreements with Africa and Latina America.
