Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

The transition from school to work is a crucial moment in the lives of young people that shapes their future careers. Integrating young labour markets with society therefore represents a key challenge; Many young people are disillusioned with the working landscape, which has changed quickly due to macroeconomic shocks, as well as the pandemic and its socio-economic consequences.

There is a need to include this aspect and its multiple scales within the analytical frame of school-to-work transition. This Special Issue will feature articles that discuss the opportunities and constraints that young people face in the transition from school to work in sub-national territories.

We encourage a range of contributions that adopt a variety of research designs, such as:

- Robust empirical (quantitative, qualitative, or mixed-method) studies exploring variation and determinants of youth labour market integration and school-to-work transitions in EU and non-EU territories;
- Comparative studies analysing differences across multilevel governance systems in EU and non-EU countries and regions, as well as differences in youth perceptions...
