Message from the Guest Editors

In order to mitigate climate change and promote green and blue energy, this research needs to be moved from the macro level to a regional level, where beneficial changes can be set in motion. In this context, the purpose of this Special Issue combines many aspects that are guided by rapid developments at a regional level.

Current research gaps should be addressed with a strong synergy of economic, technological, management, and financial factors to show the new face of climate-friendly regions that support and use green and blue energy.

We invite you to contact the Guest Editors directly and submit proposals for manuscripts to contribute to this Special Issue.
