Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

Topics of interest to this Special Issue include the incorporation of nanotechnology and nanomaterials into conventional building materials applied in any field related to energy consumption, including conventional and renewable energy generation. Topics of particular interest include, but are not limited to:

- nanomaterials for improving the application of solar and other renewable energy sources in buildings;
- thermal energy storage and thermally active building materials modified with nanostructures;
- nanotechnology for controlling the performance of indoor thermal systems;
- new nanomaterials for buildings and their impact on energy consumption;
- nanomaterial-based heat recovery systems in buildings;
- synthesis of nanomaterials with improved thermal properties;
- phase-change materials at the nanolevel;
- solar thermal phase-transition technologies.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Energies is an international, open access journal in energy engineering and research. The journal publishes original papers, review articles, technical notes, and letters. Authors are encouraged to submit manuscripts which bridge the gaps between research, development and implementation. The journal provides a forum for information on research, innovation, and demonstration in the areas of energy conversion and conservation, the optimal use of energy resources, optimization of energy processes, mitigation of environmental pollutants, and sustainable energy systems.

Author Benefits

Open Access: free for readers, with article processing charges (APC) paid by authors or their institutions.

High Visibility: indexed within Scopus, SCIE (Web of Science), Ei Compendex, RePEc, Inspec, CAPlus / SciFinder, and other databases.

Journal Rank: CiteScore - Q1 (Control and Optimization)
