Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Volume I of this Special Issue (https://www.mdpi.com/journal/foods/special_issues/Functional) was a great success and has gained the attention and interest of many scholars. I take the opportunity here to thank them for their contributions and support. As the topic continues to gain the attention of scholars and play a pivotal role, we are looking forward to the launch of Volume II. I hope it will be as successful as Volume I and add significant value to the field.

For this Special Issue of Foods, we are inviting the submission of manuscripts to present and compile the effects of traditional and emerging functional foods and food components on metabolic risk factors from a translational perspective by combining in vitro, ex vivo and animal studies, and or clinical trials/approaches. Original and unpublished research and highest-quality review papers addressing the physiology, cellular, genomics and molecular mechanisms underlying the modulating action of functional foods and food components in inflammation, dyslipidemias, blood pressure, oxidative stress, and immune and endocrine signaling pathways are encouraged.
