Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

With the rapid development of industry and agriculture, environmental issues have come to rank amongst the great challenges faced by human beings. On the one hand, contaminants and toxicants are ingested by humans through water, food, and air, and damage various tissues and organs of the body. On the other hand, they can also accumulate in the human body through the food chain, further aggravating harm to humans. Therefore, in-depth exploration of the metabolic process of contaminants and toxicants, elucidation of the toxicity mechanism of contaminants and toxicants, and the search for effective therapeutic targets and therapeutic drugs are of great practical significance for the protection of food safety. Ultimately, the objective in undertaking these endeavours is to prevent and treat damage caused by contaminants and toxicants in food. Researchers are invited to submit their up-to-date original research articles, review works, and short communications to this Foods Special Issue, entitled “Food Safety Management: Contaminants and Toxicants”.
