Feature Papers in Fractal and Fractional 2022–2023

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue aims to assemble a collection of high-quality and influential research and review articles in all the fields of Fractal and Fractional. The collection aims to delineate, through selected works, frontier research in fractals and fractional calculus and their applications in different fields of science and engineering. We encourage both prominent scholars and outstanding early-career researchers to contribute papers reflecting the latest progress in their research field, or to invite relevant experts and colleagues to do so. In this Special Issue, we hope to cover different areas of fractal and fractional calculus, showing the hot topics of research being carried out at the moment. Thus, we are interested in any important/emerging topic, within the scope of our journal, with the most high-quality work possible.
