Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue welcomes innovative works of research aimed at improving nutrition care practices such as screening, referral, assessment, diagnosis, intervention, and monitoring/evaluation in adult clinical populations. Multidisciplinary involvement, patient-centred care approaches (including patient or family engagement/participation in care), and healthcare technologies have been proven to optimise nutrition care delivery in clinical settings; hence, papers incorporating these aspects will be prioritised. Practice-based research and studies using knowledge translation or implementation science approaches (including findings from these methods) will also be welcomed.

The aim of this Special Issue is to broaden the scientific knowledge on how clinical nutrition care may be optimised by learning from others' experiences, and to advocate for HCPs of all disciplines to be aware of, and involved in, the nutrition care of their patients.
