Advances in Treatment of Gastrointestinal Cancer

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue will facilitate the publication of high-quality original research and review articles on the epidemiology, diagnosis, prevention, and treatment of gastrointestinal cancers and recent advances that facilitate progress in this field. This Special Issue aims to provide a platform for researchers, physicians, surgeons, and academicians around the globe to promote, share, and discuss various new issues and developments in different areas of gastrointestinal cancers, especially the recent advances in targeted therapy and immunotherapy. To reach a translational and clinical multidisciplinary audience, we welcome original full-length articles, reviews, and editorials on the epidemiology, prevention, clinical features, diagnosis, treatment, and management of patients with gastrointestinal malignancies.
