Message from the Guest Editors

For this Special Issue, we are issuing a call for research articles, review articles, communications, and commentaries focusing on novel approaches and insights addressing the contemporary issues facing forensic anthropologists today. We are seeking cross-disciplinary investigations of the importance of broadening the definition and scope of forensic anthropology, particularly in terms of activism, advocacy, and social issues. This Special Issue will go beyond examining methodology to address how this field can operate in a holistic context with a four-field approach, addressing questions such as: who gets to be a forensic anthropologist and what is their purpose in today's medicolegal system?

This Special Issue aims to cover a variety of topics related to forensic anthropology. Areas we are looking to cover include, but are not limited to: missing and unidentified persons cases, social inequality, LGBTQIA2S+ issues, migration, criminal justice reform, advocacy, and more. We look forward to developing an issue that will benefit the field and provide greater awareness to forensic and humanitarian issues facing practitioners, law enforcement, and the global community.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Humans is a multidisciplinary, anthropologically oriented online journal that publishes contributions focusing on the anthropological subfields (archaeology, ethnology/cultural anthropology, physical/biological anthropology, and anthropological linguistics), as well as those that integrate developments across subfields or implement multidisciplinary approaches. The journal is devoted to the rapid publication of cutting-edge developments in theory, method, technique, and data analysis. While original holistic research and contributions are given the highest priority, short communications and reviews are also encouraged. All contributions are rigorously peer-reviewed. Conference proceedings and Special Issues by guest editors that highlight outstanding research contributions on specific topics are welcome. The journal is designed to appeal to a diverse audience of research scientists and practitioners in both academia and industry.
