Message from the Guest Editors

In 2022, Yeungnam University, Republic of Korea, celebrated its 75th anniversary. The prestigious Yeungnam University is known for its commitment to research and its inventiveness. Novel structures and a combination of nanomaterials and polymers are mandatory for constructing high-performance, reliable systems and materials for energy, environment, and biomedical applications. Thus, research worldwide involves numerous efforts in nanomaterials and polymeric materials to attain phenomenal benefits. In this perspective, we invite the leading researchers/professors/technologists to contribute their manuscripts covering the topics of the following: developments of novel polymer materials, polymer blends, composites, reinforcement, cross-linking, ion exchange, membranes, separators, hydrogels, conductive polymers, bio-derived polymers and electrode materials, heterostructure nanomaterials, hetero-atom doped nanomaterials, the new composite of electrode materials, and core-shell structures.
