Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

I am very pleased to invite you to submit your contributions to this Special Issue of the International Journal of Molecular Science, which is focused on a molecular perspective of reproductive health. Reproduction, as with any other physiological function, is molecular based, and its comprehension will result in a better understanding of the mechanisms behind it. A better understanding of its molecular functioning may supply tools that could be useful in the diagnosis, treatment, and prognosis of reproductive pathologies, thus improving the clinical approach and, in turn, providing better solutions to the patients.
