Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue covers recent innovations relating to various bioactive natural products and their applications in the pharmaceutical, nutraceutical, and cosmeceutical fields related to academia, research, and industry. This Special Issue's emphasis is placed on biological mechanisms associated with interactions between bioactive natural products and biological systems. Outcomes may include all traditional endpoints caused by naturally occurring chemicals, both in vivo and in vitro. Endpoints of interest include but are not limited to preventing and managing human diseases, human health and skin aging, new strategies of using natural drugs, and biotechnology for yielding bioactives.
