Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

The endocrine system controls many processes in insects such as development, physiology, and behavior. Furthermore, environmental factors, pollutants, or biocontrol solutions can also affect the endocrinology of these organisms. Whether these effects are useful or deleterious, endocrine disruption can take place and have a strong effect on insects. The objective of this Special Issue is, thus, to publish new data or reviews on the endocrinology of insects, the role of hormones in various biological contexts, and the factors or molecules likely to induce disturbances in the endocrine system.

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Arthropods are a diverse and abundant group of animals that are important to a variety of research dictates. For example, hexapods act as bio-indicators of ecosystem function and pest status and serve as model systems for questions concerning physiology, embryology, genetics, and social interaction. The editorial board and staff at Insects is committed to providing contributors an open access forum to showcase objective and innovative research as well as succinct review articles. Our journal is dedicated to providing timely and thorough review of qualified submissions and we welcome you to submit a contribution.

Author Benefits

Open Access: free for readers, with article processing charges (APC) paid by authors or their institutions.

High Visibility: indexed within Scopus, SCIE (Web of Science), PubMed, PMC, GEOBASE, PubAg, and other databases.

Journal Rank: JCR - Q1 (Entomology) / CiteScore - Q1 (Insect Science)
