Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Heart failure (HF) is a highly prevalent clinical syndrome, affecting 65 million people worldwide, and its prevalence will continue to increase due to population aging and increased survival of the disease. In addition, this syndrome is associated with significant morbidity and mortality, loss of quality of life, and an increased number of hospital admissions, particularly in older adults. Diagnosis and management of heart failure remains a challenge, especially in elderly, pluripathological patients and patients with heart failure with preserved ejection fraction.

The aim of this Special Issue is collecting original research and comprehensive review articles covering topics related to diagnostics and treatments in heart failure. We are looking forward to receiving insightful submissions for this Special Issue.
