Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

Cochlear implants are a real medical revolution of the twentieth century. This technology, commonly used in clinical practice since the 1990s, has made it possible to restore useful hearing to people who have become disabled by severe to profound deafness. In addition, it has transformed the lives of children born deaf, allowing them to integrate into the mainstream education system.

For this Special Issue, it is my pleasure to invite you and members of your research group to submit studies focusing on the latest challenges in indications (SSD, electroacoustic stimulation), surgical procedures including robotic and endoscopic approaches, post-operative imaging and based-anatomy fitting, electrophysiology application as well as auditory rehabilitation, and prognosis factors. Authors are welcome to cover other specific topics that have not been mentioned but fall within the theme of this Special Issue.
