Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue of JCM offers teams with recognized expertise in the care of the elderly the opportunity to publish quality research work on acute care and/or drug management in this population. This Special Issue is open to varied topics in these two fields (acute care in older adults and medication management in older adults). Original articles on age-related atypical presentation, diagnostic tools, and the acute management of common conditions in older patients (including acute infections and acute cardiovascular disorders) are particularly welcome.

In closing, in this issue, we challenge you to provide your best visionary science to help to advance the management of acute diseases in the elderly population.
