Clinical Updates in Sepsis and Septic Shock

Message from the Guest Editors

Sepsis is defined as life-threatening organ dysfunction caused by a dysregulated host response to infection. Sepsis continues to be the primary cause of death from infection, and early recognition and appropriate treatment are required to improve outcomes, novel therapeutic interventions for sepsis have been explored over the last several decades with inconsistent benefits.

This Special Issue aims to publish contributions from distinguished authors who actively experience innovations in the field of sepsis and septic shock and want to provide more solid scientific evidence. We welcome all original works and reviews. (Note that case reports and short reviews are not accepted)
