Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

According to a recent report by the Intergovernmental Science-Policy platform on biodiversity and ecosystem services, one in five people in the world depend on wild species for sustenance and income, with fisheries being the main source of food from wild species. Thus, the conservation of these resources through their sustainable management is more important than ever to achieve the UN Sustainable Development Goals. We welcome research papers, reviews, and contributions on various aspects of marine fish biodiversity, including, but not limited to, the following:

- Taxonomy and systematics;
- Distribution patterns;
- Conservation and management;
- Adaptations and behavior;
- Genetic diversity;
- Climate change impacts;
- Anthropogenic threats.
