Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

The aim and scope of this Special Issue is to invite paper contributions on the recent developments and applications of theories, laboratory experiments, field measurements, remote sensing, and numerical modelling in hydraulic and marine hydrodynamics. Research articles covering the areas of artificial intelligence, hydraulic laboratory experiments, climate change and resulting sea-level rises, free-surface flows, hydro-informatics, the interactions of flows and waves with structures, internal waves, morphodynamics, naval architecture, remote-sensing applications, solitary waves, storm surges, tsunamis, typhoons, and wave dynamics are welcomed for possible inclusion in this Special Issue of the Journal of Marine and Science and Engineering.
