Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

In this Special Issue, we will cover all research studies related to the biodiversity assessment, ecological patterns, and conservation of fungi, including lichens and those previously classified as fungi, e.g. the fungus-like protists. We also look at how fungal biodiversity can be used sustainably in addressing human concerns and societal problems. Therefore, we welcome reviews and original research articles covering fungal diversity and distribution studies, conservation efforts, environmental monitoring, and the production as well as sustainable use of fungal products and processes.
