This Special Issue, entitled “Plant Protection: New Green Antifungal Agents”, aims to highlight current research on safe and effective fungicides against plant fungal diseases—especially on lead compound discovery, studies of fungicidal mechanism, and the formulation of fungicides. Experts specifically from the fields of plant protection, natural products, and advanced materials are invited to contribute their newest findings in the form of research articles, communications, or review articles, to provide a common platform for scientific communication, to deliver reliable information and to advance our understanding of the basis of new green antifungal agents against phytopathogenic fungi.
