Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Coronavirus disease (COVID-19) rapidly spread around the world, causing a huge medical, psychological, and economic burden.

This Special Issue aims both to provide an overview of pathophysiological and clinical aspects of COVID-19 disease and address clinical questions concerning personalized management of infected patients. Particular attention will be focused on epidemiology, prevention, public health approach, laboratory diagnosis, therapeutic perspectives, clinical management according to disease severity and site of management, and post-COVID sequelae and rehabilitation.

We welcome the submission of reviews, short communications, and original research papers targeting any of these topics.
