Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

Skin cancers, including basal cell carcinoma, squamous cell carcinoma, and melanoma, have continued to rise globally over the past few decades, and statistics have shown that skin cancer is one of the three most common forms of cancer. Fortunately, novel, more effective treatments for various types of skin cancer are in development, and early diagnosis and the exploration of innovative treatments are particularly important.

This Special Issue will focus on recent advances in skin cancer prevention, diagnosis, and treatment and the latest insights gained by clinical researchers, with a focus on how to personalize these new advances in clinical practice.
