Message from the Guest Editors

Dear Colleagues,

Precision Medicine is a growing necessity in the clinical approach to patients. This obviously also applies to Anesthesiology and Pain Medicine, which are two important aspects in clinical medicine, especially because they are both very challenging.

The main aim of this Special Issue is to collect all the information that our colleagues involved both in the everyday clinical practice and in research are willing to share with the rest of the scientific world. Communication, especially publication, is always the best way to make aware the others of the results of our experiences. This Special Issue should provide the most updated information on the topic.

We are soliciting mainly review articles, both narrative or systematic, but also meta-analysis and original research.
